

TOP 5 WARNING SIGNS
THAT YOU MAY BE SHARING
YOUR HOME WITH TERMITES

1. Termites have been discovered in other homes in your neighborhood—Termites in one home often means termites have moved into the entire neighborhood.
2. You see termites “swarming” in or around your home—The exact timing varies from year to year, but swarming typically occurs sometime in early spring.
3. You notice more “give” in your walls, floors, stairs or other areas made of or supported by wood.
4. You see vertical tubes of mud along the inside or outside of the foundation walls—These are the pathways that termites use to get from the ground into your home.
5. You see noticeable damage to support beams or other wood components of your home—Poke at the suspected area with a screwdriver or other sharp tool to see if it is solid. Termites generally attack wood from the inside out.

If you see any of these danger signs, call immediately for a termite inspection.
